VOL. XXVII.—NO. 54

CLAIMS DAUGHTER
VICTIM OF FRAME-UP
BY THE AUTHORITIES

Albert Holman, Father of Libby Holman Reynolds, Defies Police

SHE IS IN HIDING

Will Produce Daughter "At Proper Time," Lawyer Says

CINCINNATI, Aug. 5.—Branding the indictment of his daughter, Libby, a "frame-up," Albert Holman, Cincinnati lawyer, defied authorities to find her.

"I will say this," he said, "I have sent a wire to officials at Winston-Salem telling them I will be there at 2:30 o'clock and tell them they need not waste any money looking for Mrs. Reynolds."

Holman, who consistently has pointed to himself as Libby's only counsel, previously had disputed the contention of Hamilton county officials that a telegraphed request by North Carolina authorities for Libby's arrest constituted a warrant.

He maintained that attitude even after the request was confirmed by telephone. He threw open the door of another daughter's home to invite Special Investigator Joe Schaefer to search the dwelling for the former idol of Broadway who is accused with Albert Walker of killing her husband, Smith Reynolds.

He will surrender his daughter to North Carolina authorities "at the proper time," Holman said, adding "I will not give out any information on a frame-up."

Although Holman would not say whether Libby was in seclusion near to or far from Cincinnati, Mrs. Myron Kahn, the sister to whose home Mrs. Reynolds came soon after the inquest into her 20-year-old husband's death, confided that Libby could be produced "almost immediately."

Reports were current she was either in Delaware or California.

When Holman first learned of the indictment he branded it "a frame-up" and then left hurriedly to carry the news to his daughter in her hiding place somewhere "in the country."

"This is a terrible and unexpected thing," he said composedly when a few minutes after word of the indictment was given the Holman household he agreed to speak.

"This is a frame-up and a terrible injustice to an innocent young woman," he finished in almost incoherent fury.

A few minutes later he was gone. "Libby told the truth at the investigation at Winston-Salem," her lawyer-father protested with rising, increasingly sharp tones. "She can prove every word she said. My daughter is innocent."

His composure returned slightly. "I am still my daughter's only attorney," he said. "This in itself proclaims her innocence. The first thing a person guilty of such a heinous crime would have done would have been to engage powerful Eastern attorneys. She made no move at any time to do such a thing. She had no need to."

"Another point which proclaims her innocence is that she asked a member of the Reynolds family to act as executor of the estate."

He made his statement at the home of Mrs. Kahn, in suburban Wyoming, gardened residential village, about nine miles north of Cincinnati. It was there he rushed his daughter when, distraught, she was taken from Winston-Salem in an almost unconscious condition.

Libby Holman Reynolds, former Broadway torch singer, and Albert (Ab) Walker were indicted yesterday on a charge of murdering Smith Reynolds, Libby's young millionaire husband. The indictment took place at Winston-Salem, N. C.

The Forsythe County Grand Jury reported "true bills" against the two, leaving it to the Prosecutor to decide what degree verdict to seek when he brings the pair to trial.

Walker, a chum of young Reynolds, was arrested at once and placed in the county jail. Authorities at Cincinnati and New York were asked to take Libby into custody.

Mr. and Mrs. John Smith and family, 158 Otter street, spent Sunday at Ship Bottom, N. J., as guests of Mr. and Mrs. David Martin.

THESE ARE NOT
SEEDS OF DISCORD

On a Russian State farm recently, 8,000 acres were sown in wheat in 15 days by young experts flying four fast planes with a sowing spray 65 feet wide. Soviet papers hail it as a great novelty though in many other countries fast young experts were using airplanes to sow wild oats long before Soviet Russia was born.—Griddles for oatmeal or wheat cakes, equipment as well as used farm machinery and garden tools are sold through the Courier's classified ads.

R. F. C. REJECTS STATE REQUEST

Harrisburg, Aug. 5.—A challenge as grim as it was unequivocal, confronted the State Assembly today. The Federal Reconstruction Finance Corporation will help those who help themselves. That precisely was the sequence of a charge flung down to Pennsylvania by the Government relief agency. Representatives of the Commonwealth pleading for Federal aid on the basis of two extraordinary relief sessions was sent from Washington with what, in effect, was a flat rejection.

PROBE LIQUOR RING

Philadelphia, Aug. 5.—With two suspects already in jail and a score or more of magistrates, constables and special deputy sheriffs expected to be arrested momentarily, Delaware county authorities today began a searching probe into an alleged liquor extortion ring. The ring is alleged to involve officers and officials of Delaware, Montgomery and Chester Counties while scores of private citizens were the victims.

Flori, electrocuted for a South Philadelphia gang murder, and her man companion, were held in jail here today. The woman gave her name as May Pizze, 26. The man said he is Charles Ficarra, 30. Police said the latter is under a long time parole in connection with a hold-up staged here some time ago. The couple are wanted for attempting to pass a bogus note in Gloucester, N. J.

FIRE THREATENS EMLENTON

Emlenton, Pa., Aug. 5.—The entire business section of this village was threatened with destruction today when fire of undetermined origin swept through at least 20 buildings. As a general appeal was made to nearby towns for fire fighting equipment, flames leveled a number of small garages and storage buildings. No estimate could be made of the damage inflicted, but numbered among the ruins were a clothing store, jewelry store, automobile tire shop and several homes.

HUNT BANDIT TRIO

Philadelphia, Aug. 5.—Police today were searching for a trio of bandits who last night bound Adolph Bilo, a baker and his sister-in-law, Mrs. Mata Bilo with neckties, administered a beating to both victims and escaped with $108 of the bakery funds. In their flight from the shop the thugs knocked down Ernest Fogarty, 17, who was passing the store, and then disappeared on foot in the darkness.

TAG DAY ARRANGED FOR THE CADETS TOMORROW

Will Assist in Defraying the Expenses of the American Legion Convention

TO LEAD 9TH DISTRICT

American Legion Cadets will conduct their annual tag day tomorrow throughout Bristol and adjoining territory.

The reason for the tag day is the boys' desire to go to the American Legion convention in Pittsburgh, August 18th, 19th and 20th, as a combination camping trip and participation in the state competition of junior bugle and drum corps, coupled with a desire to bring the name of Bristol before the people of the western part of the state.

Ordinarily the trip would not be considered leaders of the Cadets state, but due to the generosity of a man from across the river in New Jersey the trip was considered. The transportation is thus arranged for, the balance to be raised being for board and lodging of the boys. With what sums have been garnered, plus a supper to be conducted by Mrs. M. Durham, of the American Legion Auxiliary, Robert W. Bracken Post, the lads feel they will not be placing too big an obligation on the populace during the tag day. They appreciate all assistance given, and state that donations of any amount up to 25 cents for the tags will be most helpful, and feel that those who are employed will be able to assist in this manner.

The trip which will start Thursday, August 18th, will consist of stops at Gettysburg, Harrisburg, Uniontown, Greensburg, and Pittsburgh.

The senior or Legion corps of Bristol post will not attend the convention which leaves only the Cadets to lead the entire Ninth District in the parade in Pittsburgh on the 20th. Five Legionnaires will chaperone the boys.

The tract continues along Broad street to Cook's Run, and a major portion of it could be well cultivated for farming purposes.

In many sections of the country ex-service men have started community truck patches and this could be done on the Margolis tract.

"Pete" Firce proved too much for the A. O. H. team last night as the Edgely team won its fourth game of the second half, winning easily, 9-1.

Firce allowed the losers but three hits and fanned nine batters. He was in danger twice, once in the first inning and then in the third, but he always managed to push the third strike over the hitters to retire the side.

A pass to Sullivan and H. Brady's double was the cause of the only tally made against the Edgely hurler.

"Frankie" Dick, "Dykes" Manzo, "Jake" Tranotti, and "Ed" Dugan with two bingles each led the hitters of the game. Dugan, Tranotti and Manzo had a double each in their hit column.

The invaders scored two runs in the second, one in the third, and a trio of runs in the fourth, and fifth.

DESPONDENT WOMAN ENDS LIFE

Pittsburgh, Aug. 5.—A death note was being investigated today as authorities sought a death motive which prompted a woman believed to be Mrs. Ira C. Delaney, of Philadelphia, to plunge 2 stories to her death here last night. The note found indicated despondency over ill health was the cause for the woman's act. It requested that I. B. Delaney of Philadelphia be notified.

BONUS ARMY IN TURMOIL

Johnstown, Aug. 5.—What there was left of the bonus army here was again in turmoil today and state, county and city officials were ardently prepared for trouble. Leaders of the evincing marchers assured Mayor Eddie McCloskey that "everything would be orderly," but the Mayor was taking no chances and the situation was recognized as tense.

State police milled about the ill-natured hosts of marchers preparing to depart, but did not interfere with their activities and two contingents of State troopers were reported nearby in case of emergency. All police of Johnstown and authorities of Cambria and Somerset counties were on 24 hour duty and there were no furloughs.

There were about 3000 marchers in the lower lying encampments four miles outside of Johnstown and Mayor Eddie McCloskey has ordered the encampments cleared of marchers by nightfall. There are a number of obstacles which must be overcome, however, with the main one the problem of transportation. The Mayor is confident he can accomplish his end, however, and served this blunt ultimatum: "Ideal Park, where the marchers have been encamped, must be cleared by nightfall. I will find transportation somehow."

SOUTHERN JERSEY HAS MANY SPLENDID BEACHES

Including Those at Atlantic City, Ocean City, Wildwood and Cape May

AN EXCELLENT ROUTE

In no other vacation center in the east are so many delightful beaches and strands to be found than in the southern section of New Jersey. The tour as outlined provides an attractive motor vacation trip through this section which includes Atlantic City, Ocean City, Sea Isle City, Wildwood and Cape May.

From Bristol the tour leads over the Burlington-Bristol bridge to Burlington, Mt. Holly and to the new concrete highway direct to Atlantic City. Atlantic City, long an all year round resort is justly entitled to the title of "The World's Playground." With its famous boardwalk stretching for eight miles along a golden strand, the city attracts visitors from all parts of the globe. A wonderful bathing beach, boating and yachting facilities and the closeness of numerous country clubs where golf, tennis and other outdoor sports can be indulged in makes Atlantic City a mecca for throngs of tourists annually. Southward from this resort excellent state highways can be followed through Somers Point and across Egg Harbor Bay to Ocean City, another charming coast resort.

From this point the travelers can use the highway paralleling the ocean-side to Sea Isle City or strike inland from Ocean City and drive south over state route 4 through Cape May Court House. Here a side trip leads to Stone Harbor, while Wildwood, Angelsea and Wildwood Crest can be reached either from Burleigh or Rio Grande over excellent boulevards. Continuing southward over route 4 however the tourists reach historic Cape May. Here the elite of Philadelphia, New York and Pittsburgh, maintain summer homes.

BATHERS NUMEROUS

With the hot weather continuing the number of bathers is increasing hereabouts.

Many devotees of the water are passed by motorists as the latter traverse the highway that parallels the Delaware in this vicinity, especially is the number great between Croydon and Edgely.

The groups are some times made up of little tots, taught to swim while yet of tender years, their little limbs healthily tanned by long hours in the sun. One might have an automobile tube, or a patented "life-preserver," over one arm, as a path is eagerly made to the nearest bathing beach.

The older ones, glad for a respite from the office, from school, from the shop, make good use of a few minutes or a few hours in an effort to cool off. The fair ones bravely challenge the sun to do its "darndest" in transmitting sun-burn, tan, or the loathsome freckles. But after all what is more intriguing than a blue-eyed winsome girl, with a slightly tilted nose enhanced by a dozen or so bits of "sun-goggles," commonly called freckles.

At each of Bristol's streets that run to the river's edge, are the lovers of the water seen sporting about. The smaller ones do well with their tiny strokes, and enjoy the "rollies," and "ducking." The older and more experienced take pride in the latest style of dive they have learned, or in swimming greater distances, and in progressing under water.

At one spot along the canal in Headley Manor, the reeds at the side of the water do not hamper the bathers in the least. Right out through the high grasses have they built their diving board, and even if a shallow dive is necessary it's just as enjoyable.

The spot along the canal just at the rear of the Grand Theatre is a popular rendezvous with swimmers, and on any warm day dozens can be seen there. The same with Edgely beach, and with swimming places along the Neshaminy from Croydon to Parkland.

Paris fashions in the bathing styles might be followed by the belles of Bristol, but to the boys and girls, and there are many of them who swim here, the garb doesn't make so much difference. Just so it is a bathing suit (and sometimes a substitute in the form of an old dress or old trousers and blouse are used) "a good time is had by all." Some of the misses might demand the zayest and brightest in pajamas, or the swankiest beach robe, together with bathing slippers, caps, and all that go with such, but to the kids any old rag, any old time—just so it means "the old swimmin' hole."

OF THEIR DAUGHTER

Quiet Search Has Been Conducted for Frances Bianco
For Five Days

HAVE NO CLUES AS YET

Girl of 17 Evidently Left During Night, Garbed in Old Clothes

Police have been asked to search for Frances Bianco, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Bianco, 1120 Beaver street, who disappeared from her home Sunday morning at about one o'clock.

Frances, who will be 18 years of age in December, retired Saturday night with the other members of the family. Her disappearance was not discovered until Sunday morning when her father came down stairs and found the side door wide open. He then searched the house and found his daughter gone. She slept with her sister, who is eight years of age.

Frances, apparently, arose and dressed in one of her old dresses more or less torn and taking a winter coat with her left the house through the side door. It is believed she left the door open so as not to arouse the other members of the family by the noise of closing it.

Frances is described as being 5 feet, six inches tall, dark complexion, dark brown eyes, weight 112 pounds, and wearing blond shoes. Her dress was of dotted material and the girl is said to be attractive.

No idea as to the whereabouts of Frances has been obtained although a quiet search has been conducted. Police have not obtained any clues and neither have the parents. The girl's parents are now quite exercised fearing that perhaps their daughter has met with foul play.

Frances is described as a quiet girl and did not have any boy friends, according to her younger sister.

Bensalem Folks Against
Change In The Highway

Action is being taken by residents of Bensalem Township to endeavor to prove that the proposed change in the Lincoln Highway, between the points of Janney and Philadelphia City Line is unnecessary. This was brought to light following a meeting of prominent residents of the township, and such action will depend whether the Pennsylvania Governor, Gifford Pinchot, tries to prevent the State Highway Department from continuing with work connected with the proposed change in the highway.

George T. Downs, proprietor of the Hy-Way Pool, Lincoln Highway, at Trevose, is one of the leaders in the movement against the change in location. Should the new route be built, the present highway will practically become a secondary route. The residents have united in their efforts to have the Pennsylvania official recognize their plea, but no reply has been received as yet. The protest against the removal of the highway was filed by James A. Walker, former secretary of Pennsylvania, under Pinchot. Walker is counsel for the property owners.

The Bensalem residents ask rather that the present highway be improved by elimination of curves, and some have stated their willingness to give land for the project.

TWO PECULIAR DOGS

(By "The Stroller")

Dogs have their peculiarities as well as do individuals, but those two thoroughbred pointers, "Pal" and "Queen," of Councilman Clarence W. Winter, I think take the lead.

"Pal" always insists on a pillow for his head. He will not rest with his head on the same level as his body or a trifle lower. When he boards his master's yacht, "Pal" pushes and pushes until the carpet is rolled into a heap and then drops his head quickly before the carpet rolls out smooth.

"Queen" takes her naps on a leather-cushioned bench in the garage and here she lays on the broad of her back with all four feet up in the air. Other times she will sit in a chair with her head supported either on the back or arm.

LITTLE FELLOW BUYS

No guarantee that the higher prices will endure and go higher came with the current rise in stock values but if the resultant improvement in public morale and confidence counts for anything the bear market sounded its death rattle more than a week ago.

Everybody anticipates a succession of advances and relapses until conditions return to normal, and plans on the theory that each new crest will be a little higher than the last and each new "low" a little less low than that preceding.

These recent market gains were not manufactured by pools, but were the natural harvest from the return to the market of thousands of small investors. The large number of transactions reflect the popular verdict that the market had reached the bottom and that the time has come to buy, which means there has been a rebirth of public confidence and that the old sock has been taken from under the mattress.

One of two things must happen if the ground gained is subsequently lost; either a powerful bear pool will have entered the market or public confidence will not prove strong enough to support the market. Both are highly improbable under present conditions, which all must admit are decidedly brighter.

TREASURE FROM THE SEA

Until 10 years ago it was believed that no diver could safely descend much more than 200 feet below the surface of the sea. The work of James Hooper at the wreck of the Cape Horn off South America in 204 feet of water was considered remarkable at the time.

Since then the metal diving suit has come into use, and in 1925 a German diver spent two hours in such a suit of armor at a depth of 460 feet, later descending to 525 feet without serious inconvenience.

Modern deep-sea diving suits are miniature submarines, built of heavy metal to withstand terrific pressures. They have made possible the salvaging of rich prizes from the ocean floor and hold forth the promise of eventual recovery of fabulous wealth whose owners, as they say it go to the bottom, believed it had passed forever beyond the hand of man.

Even now Italian divers are working in 400 feet of water off the French coast in an attempt to recover $5,000,000 in gold and silver from the liner Egypt, which sank in 1922. The miracle they plan to perform is to carve the 65-ton hullion room from the ship and lift it with its contents to the surface.

Something seems to tell us that some future generation with a still better diving suit will glean some historical facts and claim a reward in precious metals and gems from those Spanish treasure ships which sank centuries ago to leave a heritage of legends that have never been improved upon.

Congress will not leave the beer bill on the table long enough to make a white ring.

If that drug, which makes the user divulge his whole past, is new, after-dinner speakers have been using something just as good for generations.

'MURDER of the NIGHT CLUB LADY'
THE NEW THATCHER COLT DETECTIVE MYSTERY
BY ANTHONY ABBOT
COPYRIGHT, 1931, BY COVICI-FRIEDE INC., DISTRIBUTED BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

SYNOPSIS

Following the receipt of a death threat, Lola Carewe, known as "The Night Club Lady", is mysteriously slain in her penthouse apartment at 3 a. m. New Year's. Dr. Hugh Baldwin reports death due to heart failure. The only clue to the murderer is a medical laboratory specimen box found outside Lola's window. Police Commissioner Thatcher Colt attaches importance to the young man whose photograph is found in Lola's room, and whose identity Lola had refused to reveal beyond his first name, "Basil". At the mention of "Basil", Mrs. Carewe, Lola's mother, becomes hysterical. It is known that Lola quarreled with Guy Everett and Vincent Rowland, a lawyer, over investments. Eunice, the maid, confesses she was employed by Everett to report the goings on in the apartment. The mystery deepens with the finding of the body of Christine Quires, Lola's guest. Christine had been killed before Lola and her body hidden until an opportune moment arrived for the murderer to place it, soaking wet, in Lola's room. The findings are similar to those in Lola's case except that Christine's neck was bruised after death. Everett, Christine's last escort, claims he left her at the apartment elevator at midnight New Year's Eve, and then went for a ride on the Motor Parkway, alone, arriving home after 3 a. m. Mrs. Carewe informs Colt that Christine lived with a brother, Edgar, in Rochester, and was to receive her inheritance shortly. The Commissioner telephones the Rochester police to get Edward on the phone and watch him while the news is broken to him.

CHAPTER TWENTY

As the long-distance conversation ended, the work of the vacuum cleaners was getting underway. Instantly the pent-house of Lola Carewe was filled with a weird sound. At that dark hour the moaning whine, the wheezing drone of those vacuum cleaners operated by two young detectives from Center Street echoed mournfully through the rooms. Every particle of dust in the room where the crime had been done was being garnered into those bloated pouches. Millions of infinite particles were being bagged like so much game for the hunter, treasure dust in the man-hunt. Somewhere in the multitudes of particles there might lie, invisible to the naked eye, a vital clue. To some police detectives the carpet sweeper is a tool as indispensable as the magnifying glass, the tape measure, and the ink of the finger-print man.

But District Attorney Dougherty viewed the two machines with a bilious eye.

"Colt," he exclaimed, with a reproachful glance back over his shoulder, "I didn't know you had gone in for this sort of thing."

"Ever hear of it before?"

"Oh, I've read about the Viennese police doing something of the kind. But it all seems very faddistic to me, if you don't mind my saying so. I don't believe you can solve crimes by looking at sweepings under a microscope."

"But Mr. Dougherty—" I started to protest.

"Any more," insisted the District Attorney, crushing me with a glance, "than I believe you can tell fortunes with tea-leaves."

Colt smiled but did not reply. He went to the telephone and called a Morningside number. His conversation was revealing.

"Hello, Professor Luckner. I am sorry to get you out of bed. This is Thatcher Colt. I am engaged on a very mysterious case, and I want to send you some specimens for analysis. Bags of dust—and the clothing of two murdered girls. Could you start in right away? I can have them there in an hour. . . . Thank you."

As he hung up the receiver, Colt turned to Flynn.

"As soon as ready, send the vacuum cleaner bags and all the clothes of the two girls to the apartment of Morningside Heights. The men need not wait there."

"Right!"

Colt turned away. His dark brows were concentrated in an unaccustomed frown. I saw that some facet of this double riddle had assumed immense importance in his eyes. Perhaps it was only guesswork, but I had a hunch that the chief was still preoccupied with the problem of those strange markings on the neck of Christine Quires. With an abstracted air, he crossed the living-room and passed down the corridor to the foyer and the front door. Dougherty was about to follow but I motioned to him to remain. Together we stood by the fireplace, smoking cigarettes.

"What is he looking for?" rumbled Dougherty out of the corner of his mouth, after five minutes of silence.

"The murderer!" I grinned.

At that moment, Colt reappeared in the doorway. His clothing was wet, his black hair tousled. He had been out on the terrace. His eyes were set in an intent gaze that was almost somnambulistic in its complete concentration. Never had I seen the chief so deeply immersed in a problem. With slow, plodding steps he traversed the living-room—and then, suddenly, I realized what it was he was doing.

He was retracing his own itinerary, just as we had followed Lola Carewe hours ago on a tour through the rooms of the apartment.

What was the purpose of this steady retracing of old steps? I watched, fascinated—I had not seen Thatcher Colt in this strange mood before. The personal challenge, perhaps the very impertinence of these murders, had brought him to a high pitch of determined effort.

To the kitchen he went, and from there through room after room. We did not follow him, but we could hear him, poking about in closets, and opening boxes and trunks, even lifting windows and trying doors.

Finally he came back to us, having completed the circuit and re-examined all the rooms. As he entered the drawing-room, I saw him thrust some large object into the left pocket of his trousers. It made a noticeable bulge.

But of this object which he had concealed, Thatcher Colt made no mention at the moment. Instead he held out his right hand, on which lay a long, golden strand of hair—from the head of a woman.

"Does that mean anything to you?" he asked, his voice brittle, unnaturally calm. I saw that he had not looked in vain; he had made discoveries and he considered them important.

"It is a hair, the color of Christine's hair," declared Dougherty.

"Where did you find it?"

"On the floor—in Lola's room."

"But how could you find a thing like this—a thin strand of hair?"

"Because I knew where to look," answered Colt grimly. "It was near a window."

"A terrace window?"

"No, Dougherty—one that opens on a straight drop of twenty-three stories to the street."

Dougherty ran a thick hand through his mop of red curls. His blue eyes, bedeviled, rolled unhappily. "How, Thatcher—" he protested.

and faced about.

"I had forgotten something," he murmured. "Something important."

Returning to the living-room, he crossed to what had been the boudoir of Lola Carewe and knocked. Dorothy Lox opened the door.

"On the dresser," directed the Commissioner, without entering, "there is a framed picture of a young man. May I have the picture?"

"No," protested a cross old voice from within. "That's Lola's picture and I'm going to see to it; it goes into her coffin."

"There's plenty of time for that," answered Colt. "Let's have the picture."

There was no further protest. With the framed portrait in his hands, Colt went to a small table in the living-room. There, with his gloved hands, he pried at the back of the frame and finally it fell apart in his hands, frame, glass, backing and photograph.

It was the picture itself that he wanted. Holding it up to the light, he studied the photographer's trademark at the lower part of the cardboard mount.

"Marcel Grandon, 60, Avenue D'Iena," he repeated aloud. "I can remember that."

Deliberately he reassembled the pieces into order and then put the framed picture into my hands.

"You take charge of that, Tony," he instructed. "I'll tell you what to do with it later."

On the first landing, Colt stopped. "Tony," he said, "I am sending you down to Headquarters with several things of the utmost importance to this case. Listen carefully, for if my instructions are carried out, I believe we can break this case in twenty-four hours!"

"What are the things?" blurted Dougherty, rubbing his hands with curiosity.

From the breast pocket of his evening coat Colt drew forth a bulky object, wrapped in a handkerchief.

"Take this down to Headquarters," the Commissioner directed, while Dougherty eyed the irregular bundle with pudgy suspicion. "Have its contents analyzed at once. You may show it to Mr. Dougherty—handle it carefully."

I drew back the silken folds of the handkerchief. There in my hand lay the hypodermic syringe and needle which Doctor Baldwin had used, just before Lola Carewe breathed her last!

It was the syringe, then, that Colt had lifted from the medicine case. Had Baldwin noticed? Surely he had not forgotten such an important accessory! Or had he done just that, swept along in the excitement?

The possibility that Doctor Baldwin had had a hand in the death of Lola or Christine seemed remote to the point of absurdity. What opportunity had there been?

But I had no time then for idle speculation. From the left-hand pocket of his trousers, Colt took out a coil of brown leather strap. It had a buckle at the end—the kind of strap used on trunks. I noticed that the strap had recently been wet.

"What's that for?" rumbled Dougherty, ogling the strap suspiciously.

"You will take this down to Doctor Multooler," resumed Colt crisply. "Tell him I want it turned over for a laboratory analysis. Also have that strand of hair identified as belonging to Christine."

"And the frame?" I prompted.

"You are to take the picture," he added, "to Mr. Gavin, the telegraph manager in Headquarters. Tell him I want that picture sent to M. Dupont, head of the Paris police force tonight—by telephoto. Clear?"

"Clear, chief!"

"When you are through, Tony join Dougherty and me at my house!"

Prints for Summer Fashion's Favorite
Cool and Colorful Materials Enjoy Growing Popularity in Models for All Occasions. Mode Will Reach Peak at Coming Olympiad.

According to Dame Fashion, the printed word is not a whit more important than the printed frock to the woman who desires to keep up with the march of mode this Summer. There are prints in all models to suit every taste and they provide a colorful note in evening, walking and sports outfits. Printed fabrics are having more popularity now than they had earlier in the season, and there is much to be said in their favor. Prints always look cool, besides at all times appearing feminine and dressy, especially when fashioned on the new lines laid down by the style moguls. Above are three outfits which recently made their debut on the Hollywood boulevards, winning instant popularity. At left is Helene Barclay, M-G-M actress, in a youthful number which may be worn for walking or traveling. The gayly-printed frock is set off with a cape jacket of the darker tone of the printed pattern. Note the dress length. It comes to just below the calf. In center, beautiful Leila Hyams, also of the screen, shows her favorite costume for the Olympic games. It is a one-piece frock of printed blue and white plaid, set off with white accessories. This outfit will be popular during the international games. At right is a lovely afternoon frock, the choice of Ruth Mannis, film player. It is of black, grey and white printed chiffon, set off with a black butterfly belt and accessories add charm to this ensemble, as does the veil-edged black hat.

TRICKS of MAGIC EXPLAINED by Will L. Lindhorst

THREE MATCHES CAN BE LIFTED WITH ONE

1. Sharpen the end of one match, put a slit in the end of another and place the sharpened end in the slit so that the two matches are held together.

2. Balance a third match against the first two, forming a pyramid or tent-shape arrangement.

3. Insert the fourth match under the apex of the three, and tilt the two fastened together slightly forward so that the third match falls forward beneath the first two. The three matches are then pressing against the fourth or lifting match and it will be found easy to raise them.

Dave Ennis was the winning hurler for the Hibernians in their tilt with the Paper Mill team. Minkema and Styles shared the pitching burden for the losers. "Gige" Dougherty led the hitters with four in four. Among his collection of hits were a triple, double and two singles.

Devlin, of Hulmeville, and "Ike" Watson of the Odd Fellows, both hurled good ball in their fray, but Devlin turned out to be the better twirler.

"REVAMPED" ACES FROM BENSALEM STAGE A WIN

The Aces from Bensalem journeyed to Echo Beach Wednesday evening and defeated that team by the score of 3 to 1. "Johnny" Torpey, pitching with real support, ended a rally of the Echo Beach team with two men on when he struck the next three men out.

The shortstop of the Aces pulled one of his spectacular stops in the second frame when he snatched a sure single out of the air for the final out in that inning.

Lawrence Davis, newly-acquired outfielder of the Aces, made the first hit for his team and scored the first run. His wallop was a neat two-sacker and started a barrage of base blows that spelled defeat for Wandel, the losing hurler.

The next game the Aces are scheduled for is on Monday night with the Hulmeville All Stars.

JEFFERSON A. C. WINS 16TH STRAIGHT GAME

The Jefferson A. C. swept to their sixteenth victory of the season when they defeated the Rohm & Haas team on the Maple Beach field, by the score of 8-3.

The feature of the game was the fielding of Jim Hibbs and Walt Tomlinson which enabled the "Mules" to win the game.

"Eagle-Eye" Keating, singled, walked twice, and fled out in four trips to the plate, while Bud Wright had two hits out of three trips to the plate. Earl Wright hit best for the R. & H. team getting two bingles.

Feminine Olympic Competitors

By HARDIN BURNLEY

"BABE" DIDRICKSON
AMERICA'S "ONE GIRL TRACK TEAM"—MOST VERSATILE OF FEMININE OLYMPIC STARS

MISS HIDEKO MAEHATA
JAPAN'S GREATEST WOMAN SWIMMER--OUTSTANDING FEMININE COMPETITOR OF THE JAPANESE TEAM--AND--

BONNIE MEALING
BACKSTROKE SWIMMING ACE, WHO HEADS AUSTRALIA'S FEMININE CONTINGENT!!

THE Fair Sex in the Olympics! Although to the modern sports public there is nothing surprising in the spectacle of women competing in the Olympic games, what a shock it would give the old Greeks who originated the Olympics back in 2000 B. C. if they could come back and witness the modern Olympiad!

Open your Ancient History books, boys and girls, and you will read that in the ancient Olympic games women were not only barred from competition, but they were not even allowed to witness the games as spectators!

That was all very well for the ancient Greeks, but I'd like to see anybody stop the ladies from competing in the Olympics NOW. Times have changed, and if you don't believe me, just remember that a few weeks back the United States and Poland nearly started a track war, battling to secure the services of Miss Stella Walsh for their respective Olympic teams!

No, my children, we ain't living in Ancient Greece; not by a long shot!

Although, with the men's track and field championships in full swing at Los Angeles, the feminine Olympic competitors are more or less overshadowed at present, the ladies will have their innings next week when the swimming events occupy the center of the stage.

One of the best known of the invading woman swimmers is Miss Bonnie Mealing, Australia's backstroke champion, who holds the world's record in this event. Miss Mealing's reign will be seriously threatened at Los Angeles by pretty Eleanor Holm, America's standard bearer in the back stroke race, who recently lowered the Australian girl's mark.

Japan, which is taking such a keen interest in the games this year, has a number of feminine competitors at Los Angeles. The Japanese women's swimming team is headed by Miss Hideko Maehata, champion swimmer of the Orient. Most versatile of all the woman athletes now competing in the track and field events at Los Angeles is the Texas "tom-boy," Miss Mildred "Babe" Didrikson. Miss Didrikson is practically the entire U. S. women's track team. She took five first places and tied for another in the Olympic tryouts, breaking three world's records and winning the National A. A. U. track and field championships single-handed at Evanston, Ill., last month. Incidentally, she is also a good baseball player, holds the women's record for the baseball throw, and is an experienced hand at about every other sport there is! As far as athletic ability is concerned, the Texas "Babe" has certainly proved that the Greeks made a big mistake in barring the ladies from Olympic competition.

And when it comes to track and field competition at Los Angeles, don't forget those sturdy German frauleins, who hold most of the world's records in the women's field events.
